CARE OF CAPES & SKINS

Once your trophies reach our factory, great care is taken to ensure that the end product is of a high quality. However, we cannot perform miracles with hair slip or bad skinning that takes place in the field.

Therefore, here are some tips on how to ensure that your trophies are well prepared:

Always skin the animal as soon after death as possible. Skin in the shade and NEVER drag the animal. After skinning, wash the cape in cold water to remove all traces of blood and dirt. Lay the cape out on a bag or tarpolin and salt well with fine salt. Rub in well. Make sure that the ears have been turned inside out all the way to the tip. The lips must be split all the way around. Remove all fat or meat clinging to the skin, nose and lips. Rub salt into these areas particularly well. After three days remove the salt and re-salt with fresh salt. When dry, pack away until the trophies can be delivered to us. Be careful of rats or skin beetles. Boil skulls and remove all flesh and brains. Place skulls in the sun and dry. Do not place skins in the sun and/or on netting wire or metal to dry. Remember the wounded animal which takes some hours to track and put down will need special attention to the skin as hairslip can occur more easily in these animals. It is best to have your trophies delivered to us as soon as possible after the hunt. Kudu, gemsbuck, eland, bushbuck, nyala, steenbuck and klipspringer skins are more sensitive than others and consequently require more attention whether wounded or not.
